I. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions below.

The newest con Game played on the Internet by hackers is called 'phishing'. The term is derived from 'fishing' trying to obtain personal information from web users via spam email.

You receive an e-mail message that seems to come from your bank or credit card company, with the correct logo and look. The message contains a link to a website, which resembles the company's website closely. The message usually informs you that someone has tried to hack into your account, or that there is an error in the balance or that you have no money in your account. The message then asks you to confirm your credit card number, your password, your account number and other vital information, so that things can be 'set right'.

Once you part with the information, it takes the scamster no time at all to steal your identity.

Phishing is now a wide spread phenomenon and earn its perpetrators millions of dollars. The only way to avoid it is to be very careful when parting with personal information online and checking to make sure that the message is from an authentic source.

Time: 1½ hours

Note: All the answers should be done on the Answer Sheet.

I. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions below.

'Christmas won't be Christmas without any presents', grumbled Jo, lying on the rug.

'It's so dreadful to be poor!' sighed Meg, looking down at her old dress.

'I don't think it's fair for some girls to have plenty of pretty things, and other girls nothing at all,' added little Amy, with an injured sniff.

'We've got father and mother, and each other,' said Beth contentedly from her corner.

The four young faces on which the firelight shone brightened at the cheerful words, but darkened again as Jo said sadly, 'We haven't got father, and shall not have him for a long time.' She didn't say, "perhaps never", but each silently added it, thinking of father far away, where the fighting was.

Nobody spoke for a minute; then Meg said in an altered tone, 'You know the reason Mother proposed not having any presents this Christmas was because it is going to be a hard winter for everyone; and she thinks we ought not to spend money for pleasure, when our men are suffering in the army. We can't do much, but we can make our little sacrifices, and ought to do it gladly. But I am afraid, "I don't" and Meg shook her head, as she thought regretfully of all the pretty things she wanted.

'But I don't think the little we should spend would do any good. We've each got a dollar, and the army wouldn't be much helped by our giving that. I agree not to expect anything from mother or you, but I do want to buy UNDISCERNING AND SINTRAM for myself. I've wanted it so long,' said Jo, who was a bookworm.

'I planned to spend mine in new music,' said Beth, with a little sigh, which no one heard but the hearth brush and kettle holder.

'I shall get a nice box of Faber's drawing pencils. I really need them,' said Amy decidedly.
